Van Gogh in Arles Harry N. Abrams

Vincent van Gogh spent 15 months in Arles, in the South of France. His production during that time marked the zenith in the development of his art. Professor Ronald Pickvance, who served as guest curator at The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City was responsible for making the final selection of all the paintings and drawings from van Gogh's time in Arles, that were included in the exhibition. Professor Pickvance wrote the exhibition's catalogue. His profound understanding of van Gogh, the artist, is quite clear in the carefully structured presentation of information in this book. Because van Gogh is so poignantly present in each of his works, the paintings and drawings that are part of this exhibition and included in this book, occupy a very special place in the many private and public collections in which they reside.
